

Guthrie Hausken

Humanoid of Technical Editing

"A fresh college graduate with a technical writing certification, a passion for our game, and a history of volunteer technical writing work? Why would I not hire him?!"

-YOU, PROBABLY

LORE AND LINEAGE

University of Oregon – B.A. in English, GPA 4.06. Guthrie was known in his time to write award-winning essays, uphold a place on the Dean's list, and volunteer as a writing center peer editor. Rumored to be secretly moonlighting as an editor for graduate students who need grant proposals and good dissertations.

Oregon State University – Technical Writing Credential, in progress (expected completion July 2026). At an unassuming institution hidden in the Pacific Northwest, Guthrie honed specialized skills in Technical Documentation, Human-Centered Design, Instructional Materials Development, and Accessibility Studies.

Traits

SME Whisperer. Guthrie can communicate with subject matter experts of any discipline, translating their arcane knowledge into effective documentation.

Audience Awareness. Guthrie can automatically understand the knowledge level, needs, and expectations of any audience chosen by the DM.

Grammatical Acuity. If Guthrie encounters written language, he must edit it before continuing, applying a grammatical structure aligned with the most recently used style guide.

(Past) Actions

Stephen Swig Essay Prize. Guthrie submits a polished essay of exceptional literary merit. Intelligence Saving Throw: DC 15, Guthrie wins a $500 award for the best humanities essay of the year.

Tutor. Guthrie conducts one-on-one editorial consultations for writers, editing for clarity, tone, grammar, and style adherence. Guthrie can manage multiple editing sessions without losing quality. (2 years at Oregon State University)

Volunteer. Guthrie volunteers at his local neighborhood association as a technical writer. Any outdated internal documents Guthrie can see are turned to effective, unified, modernized versions. (6 months to current at Woodlawn Neighborhood Assn.)
